A Convincing Democratic Speech by Virginia's Gifted Son-News of General Interest From the City Over the River,

MANCRESTEE BUREAU RICHMOND TIMES.

Major Holmes Conrad, of Winchester, made a splendid speech in Leader Hall last night, ably discussing the main features of the canvass in the most exhaustive manner. He spoke for an hour and a quarter, and his speech was pronounced the best heard during the cam-

Leader Hall, which is said to accommo date 800 people, was full to the doors, and the most earnest attention was given to Major Conrad's words.

The audience was largely composed of the iron workers, who so largely make up Manchester's population, and a number of negroes were present, who listened attentively to every word spoken.

attentively to every word spoken.

The stage was occupied by a number of prominent Democrats. Among them were: Dr. T. P. Mathews, Judge John H. Ingram, Colonel B. O. James, Augustine Royall, George H. Jewett, Dr. Lawrence Ingram, George E. Gary, John W. Arrington, B. P. Vaden, W. D. Craig, W. D. Lithgow, Rev. John J. Clopton, Captain William Whitworth, Joseph J. Blenton, James Holliday, R. L. French and others. and others.

MAJOR CONHAD.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. George K. Macon, chairman of the Democratic committee of Manchester, in a ew weil chosen words. Major Conrad gracefully acknowledged his pleasure at meeting such an audience, and at once entered on a powerful and incisive presentation of the issues of the canvass. He said in commencement that the Democratic party in thirty years had not had such cause for encouragement, and that never before in the history of any country had such a thing happened as that at Chicago, when a convention largely composed of hostile forces and influences hearkened to the almost unani-largely composed of hosine lottes and influences hearkened to the almost unanimous demand of the people of the land for Grover Cleveland for President.

These remarks couched in beautiful language were heard by sympathetic ears, and were responded to by cheers.

It is references to the Third party people were of the most kindly character. He said having deligently studied their complaints and the character of their needs it was plain that they had been misguided and misled; that for some reason not easily explained they were laying their troubles at the door of the Democratic party, who for thirty years had not had the power to repeal or make a law.

a law. The silver question was ably discussed, and the claims of the Third party rela-tive thereto were swept away like chaff before the wind, and their exaggerated leg to stand upon. He denounced their claims as being blatant, empty and the most erroneous ever foisted on a longsuffering people.

The iniquities of the high tariff were so plainly illustrated that the wayfarer, though he be a fool, could understand.

The Democratic principle of a teriff tar only sufficient to defray the actual expenses of running the Government was set forth in equally as plain terms, and the hits made were enthusiastically and the hits made were enthusiastically cheered by the wage-earners present.

The speaker related a conversation he had with a G. A. R. man on the train, who was a foreman in an Ohio iron works, and said that he knew of over a thousand men formerly voting the Republican ticket, who would vote for Cleveland in November, because they had found that the protective tariff promises were never carried out, but was a hideous atrocity.

The entire address was of the most calmly logical and masterly character, but the discussion of the Force bill was yet more powerful, and was so clear and instructive that if there were any doubters as to its iniquities they left convinced. The occasion was a great success, and all left with a feeling of pride that they were Democrats.

were Democrats.

A Memorial Museum.

Mrs. Joseph Bryan, the president of the Association, has issued the following appeal:

placed relics of our past. Yet we feel that in every Southern State all who loved or wore the gray will wish to participate in the restoration of the "White House of the Confederacy:" for, despoiled by the ruthless relic hunter—the headquarters of the Federal army and also of District No. 1, and at the last a public school—it has suffered alike from friend and foe, and it now requires to be thoroughly repaired.

We hope very soon to make of it a memorial museum for the entire South, and, as the capital of the Confederacy, it lays a claim to your hearty co-operation. We entreat that in every way in your power you will further this plan, so that within these walls there may be placed, by your efforts joined to ours, a collection worthy of our South. Thus and thus only shall our children's children know the true history of that glorious struggle, and, knowing, imbibe and honor the spirit of that time. We would, therefore, urge upon each State of the Confederacy the need for immediate and generous action, that this museum may be put in readiness to receive these treasures. Help us, then, to establish this imperishable monument, which shall, with a clarion voice, proclaim to future ages the unparalleled valor and unflinching loyalty of those who loved, labored and lost.

Can it be that we appeal in vain to the men and women of the South?

A Fatal Shooting Scrape.

Winston, N. C., Oct. 12.—Special.—Kernersville was the scene of a fatal shooting scrape this morning, a difficulty having arisen between W. M. Bodenhamer and C. B. Hasten over a law suit. A few weeks ago Hasten was arrested and tried for em-ezzlement. He had exchanged some books bezzlement. He had exchanged some books for a horse belonging to K. D. Whitaker, of Pilot Mountain, and refused to make a satisfactory settlement with the owner of the books. At the trial Lawyer Bodenhamer appeared against Hasten, who has been angry with him ever since for the manner in which he criticised him. At 9 o'clock this morning Hasten went to the office of Boden-hamer in a state of indignation and com-menced to abuse him. After exchanging warm words the two men walked out of the warm words the two men warren out of the house into the street, when Hasten drew his pistol and fired at Rodenhamer, the ball entering the right side of his neck and com-ing out on the left side. Hasten then walked off up the street and shot himself twice in the left breast, both balls taking effect near the heart. He died in twenty minutes. Bodenhamer is a young lawyer, a son of Dr. L. I. Scheme of a New York Millionaire to Win at the Races.

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.-The most diabolical plot that has been attempted on any of the tracks of the National Trotting Association this season was frustrated this afternoon at the Philadelphia Driving Park by the death of a horse in the 2:22 pacing race, which had been drugged so that he could not win. Grover S., the brown pacing gelding, with a record of 2:14 1-4, made last weeks at Baltimore, was the victim, and the outcome was the ruling off of all tracks of the
